at The Fortune Garden Restaurant

12 non-profits will receive BRC grants

If there was ever doubt about why Rotary exists, next week’s meeting will provide tangible proof – it’s the meeting when we hear from representatives of not-for-profit organizations in the QC community that are this year’s recipients the BRC’s Charitable Giving Board grants. With grants ranging from $500 for the Humane Society of Scott County to the maximum $2,500 for the Supplemental Emergency Assistance Program, BRC will provide a total of $20,000 in assistance to 12 organizations. Come a little early if possible, so you can finish lunch and give our guests plenty of time to explain their programs.

Agency guards rights in city

Greg Jager, Bettendorf city attorney – and a past president of BRC – came to the meeting to talk about the Bettendorf Human Rights Commission. Its seven members “enforce the anti-discrimination laws in Bettendorf,” he explained. “It’s a very low-key commission,” he added. Most complaints are determined to be unfounded, he said, but when there is a violation “it takes action, because we don’t want things like that happening” in Bettendorf. He cited one example of a young African-American man who worked as a waiter in a restaurant where the manager referred to him using the N-word. The young man filed a complaint with the commission, and the matter was swiftly settled by arbitration, Jager said.

On his way to talking about the work of the city’s Human Rights Commission, Jager talked of two of his favorite cases – an illustration of how representation by a lawyer can actually prove a pony is a bird and an incident involving Decker Ploehn and two drag racers when he was police chief.
