Playhouse helps those with Down syndrome

At the Jan. 16 meeting we'll learn more about Gigi's Playhouse of the Quad Cities, the organization with the vision "to see a world where individuals and Down syndrome are accepted and embraced in their families, schools and communities." Michelle Hornbuckle is the site coordinator of the facility at 3906 38th Ave., Moline, which offers support and some 20 programs, most of which are educational. Each of those programs has "a purpose with specific goals in the areas of social skill development, speech and language, or academic achievement," according to its Website.

Remembering Newtown victims

From his perspective as a funeral director who has witnessed many funerals involving the death of a child, Dave

Death shared some thoughts and observations during the Jan. 9 meeting.

The Quad-City vigil for the victims of the Newtown, Conn., shooting will begin at 6:30 p.m. Monday, Jan. 14, at Modern Woodmen Park. Bettendorf Rotary, especially Glenn Kass and Chris Glass, have taken a lead role in organizing the event, with the involvement of all QC Rotary clubs.

"As humans we are hard-wired with the need to grieve," Dave observed. "We reconcile our loss in two ways. The first is grief, which is an internal process – each individual experiences and expresses grief differently."

The second way we reconcile the loss of life, Dave continued, is mourning – "a shared social response." The Monday night vigil, he added, "is a good thing for Rotary to do. "We don't know the people (slain) in Connecticut, but we can honor their lives" and show support for their families.

The free-admission vigil will include prayers and reflections by Quad-City clergy, musical performances and comments from officials of both District 6000 (Iowa) and District 6420 (Illinois).

The Newtown Rotary Club has established a special fund to assist the short- and long-term needs of those in that community. Donations will be accepted Monday evening.

The meeting opened...

The meeting was called to order by President Mark Ross, who led the recitation of the 4-Way Test. The duo of Tom Howard (tenor) and Scott Naumann (musical laptop) led the singing of “This Is My Country,” and, after introductions, resumed the songfest with “Sing Out a Song of Rot’ry” and “Grandfather’s Clock” – complete with clinking glasses to accompany the “tick-tock” lines.
